How to Write Song Lyrics \u2022 Berklee Online Take Note

The Craft of Songwriting by Robbie O'Connell Definition A good song is the perfect combination of melody and lyrics. The melody should set a mood that enhances or at least is compatible with the lyrics. For example a funny song should have a bright or up-tempo melody and a sad or serious song should have a slow or deliberate tempo.

In The Craft of Lyric Writing, Sheila Davis lists the optimum title spots in different song forms, which usually fall in the first or last line of the verse or chorus, and she adds: Skilled lyricists intuitively pinpoint the musics most identifiable phrase, drop in the title, and work from there, forward or backward. (Note that this is both a commercial strategy and a creative one, since it provides a toehold from which the writer can fit the words to the music.) Repetition ...
